Orthodoxy and Reform - the Past and the Present - the rise of the “Adjectival Jew” – Orthodox, Conservative, Reform - has led to a series of internal divisions within the Jewish people which threaten severely to undermine Jewish unity, and particularly at a time when anti-Semitism is undergoing an undeniable resurgence. How did this happen? Have any of the tactics used produced a desirable result? How should we go forward?

Elkan D. Levy

Elkan D. Levy was until his Aliyah in 2011 the Director of the Office for Small Communities, responsible for 70 communities in the UK, from Truro to Margate and from Bognor to north of Aberdeen.

A solicitor for 30 years, he also served as President of the United Synagogue from 1996-99.

Educated in London, Israel and New York, Elkan is well-known as a dynamic lecturer who is deeply interested in British and World Jewry, its past and its future.

He believes passionately in the unity of the Jewish people, and the religious imperative of speaking to all Jews, of all levels of observance and none.
